Dear Mr. Wenbo Zhao:

I am writing concerning the September 6, 2020 GRE® General Test at-home® administration. Educational Testing Service (ETS) administers tests under secure, standard conditions to assure that all test takers are given the same opportunity to demonstrate their abilities. As stated in the Policies and Procedures for this program, which are set forth in the Information and Registration Bulletin and on the program website, test takers must present positive identification each time you test, must follow testing procedures, and must not engage in any behavior that disrupts standard testing conditions.

ETS received a report stating that you failed to show the proctor your erased whiteboard or plastic transparency sheet prior to ending the test session. Because this appears to have been infractions that did not materially affect the opportunity of any test taker to demonstrate their abilities under secure, standard conditions, no further action will be taken and your score will be reported.

Please familiarize yourself with test procedures before taking any other tests administered by ETS. Violations of test procedures may result in score cancellation, and repeated violations may result in your exclusion from future testing.

Sincerely,

Trevina Shenouda
